----- IRAQ'S STRATEGIC DEMOCRACY AND HUMAN RIGHTS PRIORITIES -----

¶4. The Iraqi National Security Strategy for 2007-2010 identifies promoting human rights as a political component for overcoming threats and realizing the GOI's interests. Toward that end, the GOI strategy includes adopting international human rights criteria within the national judiciary, including human rights education in the cultural and educational sectors, and reinforcing the role of civil society institutions by supporting their development and independence.

¶5. The Ministry of Human Rights has articulated strategic human rights priorities to establish an adequate infrastructure to protect human rights and fundamental freedoms. Its priorities include:

-- Enabling Iraqi citizens to enjoy civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights without any discrimination on the basis of race, sex, or religion.

-- Bringing Iraqi laws into compliance with Iraq's human rights obligations and amending articles in legislation that contradict human rights.

-- Spreading and disseminating the culture of human rights as an alternative to the culture of violence, dictatorship and persecution that existed under the previous regime.

-- Establishing an integrated database on the status of human rights in Iraq by adopting the human development indicators that are used by the United Nations.

-- Establishing mechanisms for coordinating with the Ministry of the Environment and Ministry of Displacement and Migration to enhance the GOI's work in humanitarian assistance.

-- Establishing effective mechanisms for coordination with civil society organizations and human rights activists to achieve shared objectives.

-- Promoting relationships with international human rights organizations, especially the United Nations and its different bodies, as well as regional organizations, such as the League of Arab States, the Islamic Labor Organization, and others.

-- Enhancing the Ministry of Human Rights' role in writing special reports on human rights, such as those related to the status of human rights in Iraq or those submitted to international organizations and committees overseeing the implementation of the conventions that Iraq has joined or ratified.

-- Working for the accession of Iraq as a signatory State to all international human rights conventions and treaties, with particular priority given to Iraq's accession to the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

-- Seeking to establish the rules and requirements of peaceful coexistence and dialogue and to reject violence.

-- Archiving and documenting, by modern and scientific means violations suffered by Iraqi citizens under the former regime and afterwards, and publishing these documents as a record of an important period of Iraq's history and a lesson for future generations.
